

Delaware Report Card to launch in January

The Delaware Department of Education will launch the first phase of its new Delaware Report Card, a more consumer-friendly site to provide important educational information to Delaware families, on Jan. 16.

The Delaware Report Card, which replaces the state's school profiles site, is designed for parents and caregivers and is focused on sharing data in a usable and digestible manner.

Originally slated for a December release, the department has pushed back the launch date to allow more time to address feedback received from district and charter leaders who have been helping department staff review the draft site.
